

Fact sheet
Siemens Corporate Responsibility Report

Two key aims of the Siemens Corporate Responsibility Program are: to boost the revenue generated by the company's environmental portfolio by at least ten percent each year; and to push the level by which this portfolio cuts CO<sub>2</sub> emissions from today's figure of 114 million tons a year to 275 million tons in 2011.

The new Siemens Corporate Responsibility Report 2007 provides information on this Program and related activities in fiscal 2007.

In addition to corporate responsibility and compliance management issues, other key topics covered in the Report include environmental and climate protection, product stewardship, supplier management, employees and social concerns.

Corporate Responsibility – like People Excellence, Portfolio and Operational Excellence – is one of the levers of the Fit<sub>4</sub>2010 company program to leverage Siemens' potential. Showcasing how it intends to meet this goal, the company defines its medium-term aims and presents data on its environmental and social initiatives in the Corporate Responsibility Report.

This year's Corporate Responsibility Report is be available on the Internet at www.siemens.com/responsibility.
